Telemedicine, mobile apps for agriculture, drones for emergencies, big data, social business and sharing economy: all these new digital opportunities are shaping the relationships around the world. Some regions are showing creative use of technologies for common good and development.

For instance, Africa is the second largest world market for mobile phones and the use is increasing. Mobile devices are becoming the most effective tools for development: from using SMS, whatsapp or social media to encourage people to exchange information and goods all the way to applications used to provide real time help for healthcare and education.
